Wilkins 13270 Staff Impression

Wilkins has a style that would feel just as natural whether he's heading out for a long day in the mountains or meeting friends for dinner. He's tall, muscular, and lean. His shoulders are broad, his arms strong, and he is fit from being active in the real world more than spending time in the gym. Time outdoors has left its mark in good ways, too: a healthy color to his skin and a scattering of faint freckles across his nose and cheeks. He has an oval face, a defined jaw, and a chin that gives his face structure without making him look overly sculpted. His dark brown hair is thick and naturally wavy, usually kept short on the sides and a bit longer on top. It tends to fall into place on its own rather than looking carefully styled. Dark eyebrows frame his warm brown eyes. He has a straight nose, proportionate features, and light stubble along his jaw and chin. He’s approachable, energetic, and comfortable in his own skin.

Wilkins has a degree in Mechanical Engineering and works in a related field. He genuinely enjoys figuring out how things work and, just as importantly, building them himself. Over the years, he's picked up skills in everything from automotive repair and welding to woodworking, machining, sewing, carbon-fiber fabrication, jewelry making, carving, and 3D printing. He likes working with his hands, solving problems, and turning ideas into something tangible. He enjoys being outside and is happiest when he's moving, exploring, or working toward some challenge. Mountain biking, climbing, backpacking, skiing, mountaineering, cycling, and running all have a place in his life. He sings and plays guitar, partly for the enjoyment of it and partly because he likes having something new to learn.

Those who know him best describe him as responsible and kind. He deeply values community and hopes to start a family of his own while continuing to make meaningful contributions through his work, relationships, and the causes he supports.
