Wutong is very tall and slender with long limbs. His face is oval, with graceful features. He has thick black hair with a natural wave to it, usually worn in a relaxed style. His dark brown eyes are almond-shaped and expressive; behind slim rectangular glasses, they stand out as one of his most noticeable features. His nose is straight and narrow, and his lips are naturally full, especially when he smiles. His appearance is fresh and youthful.

Born in Malaysia to a Chinese family, Wutong grew up in a close-knit home. He speaks multiple languages and enjoys how each one offers a different way of connecting with people and understanding the world around him. He describes himself as logical and adaptable. He enjoys being around people and can fit comfortably into different social settings. He's naturally drawn to problem-solving and enjoys mathematics, probability, and statistics. That interest led him to study Finance and continues to influence the way he approaches investing and long-term planning.

Swimming has been a longtime passion, and he previously worked as a swim coach. He also enjoys cycling, bodybuilding, hiking, and bouldering. He likes activities that challenge him physically while giving him a chance to keep improving little by little. Some of his favorite memories involve outdoor adventures with friends, including hiking up a snow-covered mountain for the first time and snowboarding back down afterward. At home, he enjoys cooking and often uses it to unwind. He's just as happy making familiar comfort foods as he is experimenting with recipes inspired by different Asian cuisines. He pays attention to the small details that make people feel welcome, whether that's preparing a meal, hosting friends, or simply making sure everyone has what they need. He plays piano and listens to a wide range of genres, from softer love songs to hard rock. He also enjoys traveling and has spent time exploring different parts of Asia and North America. What he tends to remember most from those trips isn't necessarily the tourist attractions, but the local food, everyday experiences, and conversations with people he meets along the way.

Wutong hopes to build a life that allows him to spend more time with the people he cares about. Financial independence is important to him because of the freedom it can provide, not because of status or wealth itself. His hope for intended parents and their children is a healthy, happy life surrounded by good people, good food, and plenty of kindness.
